

Interactive comment on “Arctic marine climate of the early nineteenth century” by P. Brohan et al.

P. Brohan et al.

philip@brohan.org

Received and published: 13 April 2010

This review provides a series of detailed and valuable suggestions for additional work - particularly possible sources for characterisation of the instruments and observing practices used. As this paper is part of a larger program of work on historical marine climate, we hope to follow-up these suggestions in future work, particularly when making quantitative estimates of biases in the observations, and detailed comparisons with modern observations and historical simulations.

Interactive comment on Clim. Past Discuss., 6, 35, 2010.