You will see that two expert reviewers have commented on your paper. While it is possible that more interactive comments may arrive before the discussion period closes, it is apparent that the two reviewers think that the paper should be published after relatively minor correction. The journal requires that you answer the main issues raised by each reviewer. Once the discussion period closes, I would strongly encourage you to submit a new version of the paper for CP, taking into account all those review comments. Thanks for preparing and submitting this interesting paper.
