Manuscript revision

Dear Prof. Denis-Didier Rousseau,

Thank you very much for the new round of reviews of our manuscript entitled “Strong volcanic-induced climatic shocks on historical Moselle wine production” and for now accepting it pending corrections. We applied the changes suggested by the reviewers to Fig. 1 and Fig. 2 and hope these corrections now will make the article suitable for publication in Climate of the Past. We have also corrected a few minor typos in the text (commas, spelling etc.).

Regarding the comments by Reviewer #1, we already uploaded an answer to the Discussion by September 13, but for some technical error it was posted as four duplicates. When I asked for this to be corrected, all four responses (and not just the three duplicates) were removed. Our response to Reviewer #1 now reads:

“It is clear that the Reviewer envisions an entirely different type of article, with different set of methods, than the statistically based volcanic/climate–wine harvest study we have conducted. We have taken into account, and are very grateful for, the literature recommendations provided by the reviewer. But since the reviewer – as opposed to the other three reviewers – appears to wish for an entirely other type of study, we have not been able to otherwise adhere to the review.”

On behalf of all authors,

Fredrik Charpentier Ljungqvist
